Excuse me, Miss YOUNG

I want to ask a question about the construction works in Japan will the construction period be longer than that in Hong Kong?

Most construction projects in Hong Kong are in a hurry

In Japan, from planning to construction and completion is the construction period longer than that in Hong Kong?

In fact, they did not introduce the construction period in this trip

We visited the office building of the headquarters and the station

When you saw the site of the office building the scaffolding was still there and the finishing work had not yet been completed

But he told me that it will be completed in half a year

Can it be completed in half a year?

Maybe they have a lot of prefabricated components or fast installation method unlike numerous manual handling work in Hong Kong

It can be done in half a year

We think their program is also quite tight

Because we did not visit any residential construction project which is similar to Housing Department's this time So with regard to the construction time it is difficult to provide information
Thank you, Ms. YOUNG
Any other questions?

Thank you for watching
